Siger Zeischka (*1979) was born in Ghent, Belgium and studied Early Modern History at the university of Ghent, specializing in social and economic history. From 2002 to 2006, he worked as an assistant at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, where he did his PhD-research on early modern Dutch water management technologies. After defending his thesis (‘Minerva in de polder. Waterstaat en techniek in het hoogheemraadschap van Rijnland, 1500-1856’), he returned to Belgium and started to work as a researcher at the VIOE in Brussels (Flemish Heritage Institute) on the history of hydraulic infrastructures. One year later, in 2007, he left water history and began to work for the Foundation de Moffarts. As the Foundation’s scientific collaborator, he co-edited a book on noble food history (‘The dining nobility. From the Dukes of Burgundy to the Belgian Royalty’). Today, he holds the position of assistant manager.
